Loyola
College

HISTORY

Loyola College was established in 1896 and incorporated by Act of the Quebec legislature in 1899. The origins of the College, however, extend back to 1848 when the work of the Jesuit College of Quebec founded in 1635 was resumed in Montreal.

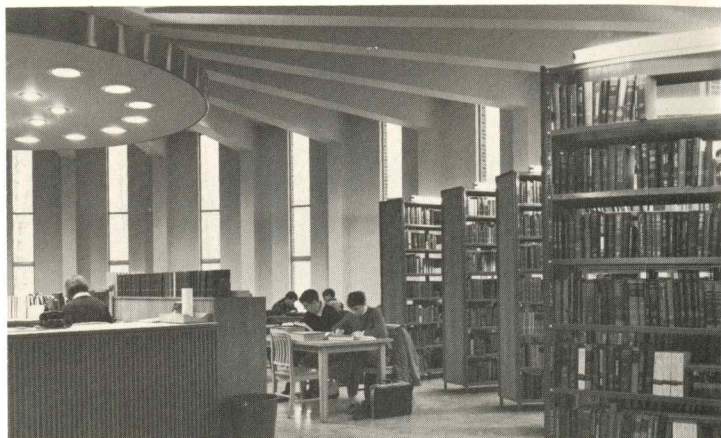

Bachelor of Arts degrees were first granted under the Charter of Laval University and then of the University of Montreal when this institution was established in 1920. Degree Courses in the English-Canadian University tradition have subsequently been extended to the Science, Commerce and Engineering faculties.

Since 1916, Loyola has occupied its present 50 acre campus in the West End of Montreal and exists as a residential college in an urban setting — a part of the bi-lingual and cosmopolitan milieu of Canada's metropolis.

Students today may choose from twenty-three fields of concentration offered in the Day and Evening Divisions — the latter established in 1957 in response to the Community need for part-time and adult educational opportunity.

Loyola is an independent member of the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada. Academic programmes are fully recognized by leading professional and graduate schools of Canada, the United States, the United Kingdom and Europe, as well as such professional organizations as the Chemical Institute of Canada, the Engineering Institute of Canada and the Institute of Chartered Accountants of Quebec.

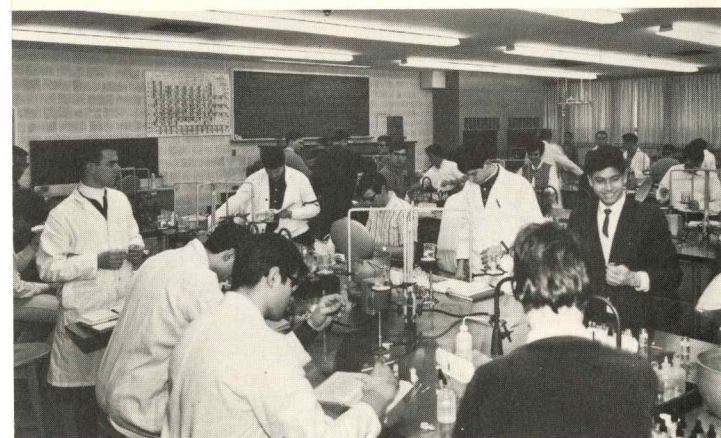

Student life at Loyola provides a balanced programme of study, recreation and creative extra-curricular activity. A substantial expansion programme of $25,000,000 is providing increased Academic facilities as well as Student Centre.

Hingston Hall Men's Residence

STUDENT RESIDENCE

Hingston Hall student residence was completed in 1963 and named in memory of Father William H. Hingston, S.J., Rector of Loyola from 1918 to 1925.

The residence is designed to offer full living accommodation for 308 male students. Included, in addition to room and meals, are recreation facilities, study rooms, one lounge, offices and chapel.

The aim of Hingston Hall is the provision of student accommodation conducive to the pursuit of educational, spiritual, social and cultural ideals. The day to day cultivation of these ideals is fostered through the availability of academic and spiritual counsellors, assisted by senior student proctors.

Hingston Hall has 132 single and 84 double rooms, each fully furnished for student use and provided with bed linen, service and blankets. Meals are served cafeteria style in the attractive dining hall.

Freshmen at Loyola living away from home are required to live in residence.

Enquiries regarding residence accommodation at Loyola should be directed to the Manager, Hingston Hall, Loyola College, Montreal 28, P.Q.

STUDENT SERVICES

While Loyola gives primary emphasis to formal learning through instruction and study in an enriched curriculum, it is clearly recognized that, in the complete education of the whole person, the student has many other needs — religious, personal, athletic, social — for which the College must make provision. To serve these needs Loyola offers a broad programme of Student Services and, within this framework, the student has ready access to educational, spiritual and vocational guidance.

Physical Education and Athletics Complex

PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND ATHLETICS

Loyola boasts the most complete and diversified college athletic and physical education program of its type in Canada. This program operates as an integrated segment of the school's total curriculum aiming to promote a high degree of physical fitness and mental alertness amongst the entire student body. It is vitalized by a full time staff of professionally trained coaches. Thirty-five activities are offered encompassing all popular and individual sports. In major areas of interest there are four different levels of play and instruction, intercollegiate varsity, intercollegiate junior varsity, intramural, and physical education classes. Loyola varsity squads play a full schedule against top Canadian and regional United States college teams. A million and a half dollar physical education centre houses a ultra modern rink, gymnasium and multifarious training, exercise, and dressing rooms.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES

Loyola offers an impressive program of student activities. Student organizations number approximately seventy-five and encompass all aspects of education. Each society is initiated, developed, and financed by the students themselves through the medium of the Student Administrative Council (SAC). The following is a brief summary of the various activities available:

SOCIAL AND CULTURAL

The chief social events of the year take shape in Freshman Week, the Athletic and Faculty dances, the Winter Carnival, and the Awards Banquet.

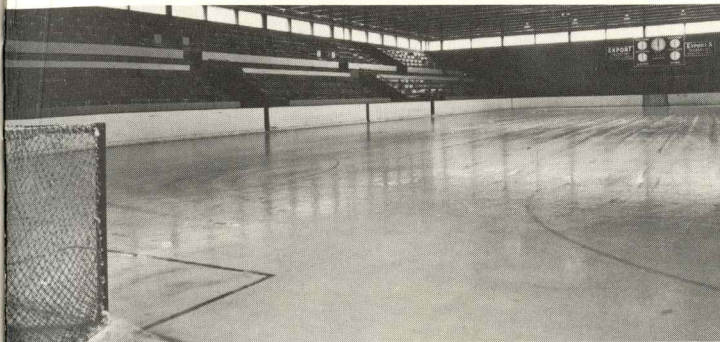

Literary endeavors find expression under the jurisdiction of the Board of Publications, which presently controls: the Loyola News, official student newspaper on campus; the Amphora, Loyola's literary magazine; the Handbook; the Student Directory; and the Review, a lasting souvenir of each college year.

The cultural atmosphere is further complemented by such organizations as the Debating Society, the Drama Society (which produces classical, modern, and original plays), and the Band, Choral, Jazz, and Folk Music Societies.

POLITICAL

At present, four political clubs exist on campus: the Young Liberals, the Progressive Conservative Club, the Campus Creditistes, and the New Democratic Party. More committed to foreign affairs and Canadian politics on a non-partisan basis are the International Affairs Society and the Political Science Students' Association, the members of which offer a widely varied schedule of events. Membership is open to all students interested in participating in campus political activities or in attending political conferences.

Rink, Physical Education Center

PROFESSIONAL, ETHNIC, RELIGIOUS, AND ACADEMIC

Within these categories are such organizations as the Chemical Institute of Canada, the Engineering Institute of Canada, and the Society for the Advancement of Management; the Chinese Students' Society and the Foreign Students' Association; the Loyola Christian Student Association (the Sodality); the Loyola Physics Club, the Economic Honours Society, the Philosophy Club, and the Pre-Medical and Pre-Dental Society.

In addition, Loyola has four fraternities and two sororities, an Honors Society (the Maroon and White), and produces radio and television programs. SAC Sub-committees cover a vast field, ranging from the Canadian University Students Overseas (CUSO), to the Inter-University Conference Committee.
